Job Description

Welcome to the Department of Chemistry at Tufts University. Our department provides an exciting and intellectually stimulating environment for undergraduate and graduate students, not only to learn from the top notch faculty, but to also participate in cutting edge research projects that encompass the many diverse interests of the faculty and reflects the interdisciplinary nature of modern chemical research. While drawing heavily on the traditional chemistry subdisciplines, and assuring expertise in the fundamentals, we also provide the opportunity to explore beyond the traditional boundaries. The Instrumentation Specialist is responsible for management of all instrumentation owned by the Department of Chemistry. Duties will include: managing research and teaching instrumentation (including those located in undergraduate teaching labs, research labs, and shared instrumentation facilities); trouble shooting, repair and setup of all instruments; training on proper use and safety procedures; managing contracts and ensuring that funding for additional instrumentation is wisely spent and providing expertise to faculty and students in labs and in research proposals and projects.
